As of Friday 16 April, the member data is again available to logged in members, but not the public.

Google has deleted member data that had been in the public domain, potentially since 4 February.

Matt supplied background and costs for the solution devised by Sarah Oates at Endure Web Studios.

The solution required an upgrade to Restrict Content Pro (from Plus to Professional), such that it controlled the security of member data held in the BuddyPress module. The upgrade provided a tick box to "Restrict logged out users from accessing any BuddyPress content" and redirect inquirer to the Home page.

While BuddyPress is free, Restrict Content Pro is USD$149 per annum for the Plus edition and USD$249 per annum for the Professional edition. LRC already have a subscription to the Plus edition, so need an extra USD$100 per annum, due each January, to control the member data. An alternative is the Ultimate (lifetime) edition for USD$749.

The Committee agreed to the extra USD$100.00 each January.,

Proposed Russell Speldewinde Seconded Kevin Phillips

Sarah recognised that the problem was her mistake and undertook to pay for her time and the first USD$100 payment. However, the Committee appreciated her efforts at solving the problem and agreed to pay her the USD$100 to share the costs.

Proposed Eric Rigter Seconded Kevin Philips
